

news'MIGRATION AND GENDER' Days

07 Apr 2016

The Days will tackle three main blocks of analysis:

1. Women. A non-ethnocentric vision of feminine migration through the paradigm of feminine genital mutilation will be offered. Hence, the movie MOOLADE, by the Senegalese filmmaker Ousmane Sembene, will be shown and, later, a debate regarding criminalization of feminine genital mutilation in the West and an anthropological analysis of its social and cultural context. The analysis will be conducted by Mariona Bernal, medical anthropologist affiliated to the School of Public Health of Andalusia, and Ana Silva, jurist and researcher at the University of Granada.

2. Refugees. Sebastian de la Obra, President of the Foundation Sevilla Acoge, will tackle the imminent situation of refugees in Europe, offering a critical vision of current migration and reception policies.

3. Immigrants: Finally, the Senegalese writer and activist, Mamadou Dia, will present his new book A las 15:00 (At 15h00), through which he manages to be the voice of several immigrants who daily see their rights violated in Europe. Dia does this through some reflections on the situation of migrations in the world. The book is a story about him and us, about the capacity to be in the shoes of the other and about the wish to make life more just and happy.
